“It’s very popular. Parents can stay near and watch or get into the course with their children. They often start out with them and end up sitting nearby and watching them. The kids can go on forever and there’s no end to the fun they have. It’s a great family adventure,” she says.

Those 13 and older can opt for the manual transfer system in the Discovery Course if parents and safety staff are confident they can follow the safety protocol, which requires verbal and visual confirmation with staff every time a line is disconnected from the system and transferred to a new cable. Safety staff are aloft in the Discovery and Mini Monkey areas at all times and monitoring the Jungle Zone from the ground.

Continuous transfer systems are the only type used in the higher Jungle Course.

The Ives say that a high quality staff is the key to operating the courses and that all employees go through a week of training before they start working with the public.

“We pay them well and they come back summer after summer because they like the work. All of our 32 employees at Chorua are coming back next year but we’re going
